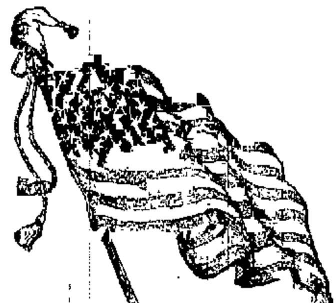
OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY



No flag but the Old Flag—the Red, White and Blue,
With the stars of a Union unbroken and true!
Arise and defend it! ye sons of the brave,
Whose blood bought the banner your valor must save.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 1, 1862.

The New Orleans Expedition.

The last received Eastern papers contain details of the movements of the Naval expedition which captured New Orleans. They are of exceeding interest. We present a brief detail of the proceedings:

On the 20th of April the expedition having burned Forts Philip and Johnson, the flag ship Hartford moved for New Orleans. As she left her anchorage, for some miles on each side of the river, houses were decorated with white flags, and in several instances torn and tattered American ensigns waved over fishing luggers and houses. People waved their handkerchiefs and seemed glad to see the ship. Everywhere on the banks, people seemed riding in great haste, telling the news of the advance. Some rabid Seceshers attempted to express their contempt. The negroes left the plantations and came to the levee, seeming to be in perfect extacies. In some places their demonstrations were ludicrous—they tossed their hats in the air, bowed, and showed by every possible means their joy. Three o'clock, at Point La Hocke, thirty teams were seen plowing, and one or two hundred negroes came to the levee to greet the ship. In the afternoon, dense volumns of smoke rose in the direction of New Orleans. At eight o'clock the ship came to anchor eighteen miles below New Orleans.

On the 25th at midnight, the cry of "fire-raft" was made. At 5 o'clock, A. M., the ship was under weigh; the "fire-raft" proved to be five ships loaded with cotton, which had been fired. They were nearly consumed.—The river was dotted with the remains of the "great steam ram" which was launched on the previous Saturday and destroyed. The negroes greeted the ship as on the previous day. One well dressed darkey, with a carpet bag on his arm, shouted, "Hurrah! hurrah for Abraham!" On the approach of the ship to the city, the smoke of the steamers going up the river was distinctly seen.

At a quarter past eleven, the Hartford, with accompanying vessels, came near two batteries which exhibited no flag. They fired into the Cayuga. So soon as the Hartford could get her guns to bear, she silenced them. Our account says:—

"The river was filled with ships on fire, and all along the levee were burning vessels, no less than eighteen vessels being on fire at one time, and the enemy were firing others as fast as they could apply the torch. Such vandalism never was heard of. The atmosphere was thick with smoke, and hot with flames. It was a grand but sad sight. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property was being wantonly destroyed. At the levee, just by the Custom House, lay a burning ram, (the Anglo-Norman). The unfinished frames of two or three more were on the stocks at Algiers. A terrible rain squall came on, and after dodging around the river for some time we came to anchor. It was then one o'clock."

The first view of the captured city, as made from the deck of our vessel was such an one as in all human probability will never be witnessed again.

"A large city lay at our mercy. Its levee was crowded by an excited mob. The smoke of the ruins of millions worth of cotton and shipping at times half concealed the people. While men were hastening up the levee, firing ships and river crafts as fast as possible, the people were rushing to and fro. Some of them cheered for the Union, when they were fired upon by the crowd. Men, women and children were armed with pistols, knives and all kinds of weapons. Some cheered for Jeff. Davis, Beauregard, etc., and used the most vile and obscene language towards us and the good old flag. Pandamonium was here a living picture. Order was to them a thing past and forgotten, and the air was rent with yells of defiance."

At two o'clock, Capt. Bailey went under order with a flag of truce, to meet the city officers at the city Hall. On his arrival there he found Gen. Lovell also. Capt. Bailey presented the demand of Com. Farragut for the surrender of the city. Gen. Lovell said he would not surrender it, but he would remove the troops from the city, which would then free it from Martial Law, and the city authorities could do as they pleased. He was informed that the city was in the power of the Federals, but would not be fired upon, provided no demonstration was made against the Government forces. Capt. Bailey returned to the ship. He was insulted all the way by the grossest indignation.

Just before Capt. Bailey reached the levee, an immense steam ram, recently put afloat, passed in flames. She resembled the Merrimac, but was more formidable.

The night previous to the arrival of Com. Farragut, the news of his approach was learned in the city, and produced a tremendous havoc. Under the lead of desperadoes all the cotton, cotton ships and two steam rams were set on fire. Gen. Lovell first set the example of burning his own cotton. The destruction of property was immense.

The panic extended to the troops—said to be from six to twelve thousand in number—and they left the city in great haste. The city authorities were informed that if they allowed any more fire rafts or other engines of war to molest our vessels, the city would be held responsible.

"After dark I went on deck to see New Orleans by gaslight. How changed the scene! A little over twelve months ago miles of shipping lined the levee—the buildings hid behind the forests of masts and rigging of vessels bearing the banners of all nations of the world. None were here now. The busy hum of workmen and the cheery song of the sons of Africa, who worked at night, were not to be heard. No hissing puff of steamers going and coming to and from the cities on the banks of this great river. No ships—no signs of life were present now. A few gaslights were burning along the levee, and the dull embers and heavy smoke gave proof of a reign of anarchy and terror. The buildings were wrapped in sombre light, and we felt that it was a city clothed in sackcloth and ashes.

It was a mournful sight, and we trust never to see its like again. Tired and weary, we sank to rest with our arms by our side, not knowing but that before morning we would be obliged to again imbue our hands in the blood of our fellow-countrymen. Nor could we tell but that bands of reckless individuals would endeavor to pick off our men with the deadly Minnie ball."

On the 29th, news was received by the Federal forces at New Orleans, of the surrender of Forts St. Phillip and Jackson. It seems that the men in Fort Jackson, finding that the Union forces had got in their rear, refused to fight, and turned the barbette guns on the officers in the unprotected casemates, and made them surrender. After the surrender of the Forts, the rebel flag officer, I. K. Mitchell, blew up the steam ram battery, Louisiana. This act being entirely against the established rules of warfare, Com. Porter put Mitchell into double irons.

To-day Pierre Soule visited the flag ship and had a short conference with the flag officer. Shortly after he returned to the land, all the marines of our fleet present embarked in small boats and went on shore to raise the Stars and Stripes on the Custom House and Post Office. Two howitzers from the ship were sent on shore to assist in covering the troops. The duty of hoisting the flag and hauling down the State flag of Louisiana, which floated defiantly from the City Hall, was delegated to Commander H. H. Bell, our distinguished Fleet Captain. The landing of the marine corps, about 100 strong, was the signal for the gathering of a large crowd, who followed the marines, but made no remarks. Their faces showed their bitter feelings, and if they had not feared the guns of the fleet they would have made short work of the marine corps.

Forming in proper military order, the line of march was made for the Custom House' where the Stars and Stripes were hoisted. It was precisely forty minutes past eleven o'clock when its folds fluttered in a light Southern breeze.

This ceremony being over, they marched to the City Hall, pulled down the rebel flag and raised the Stars and Stripes. And thus was consummated the capture of New Orleans.

The rebel leaders had realized the importance to their cause of the continued possession of New Orleans. They had expended a vast amount of means in building steam rams and in arming and building forts to sustain them in its possession. They had also a considerable army within the city to overawe the people, and to act with the naval force. All did not avail them. They were compelled to succumb to the loyal forces—quietly, humbly, effectually.

GOV. SPRAGUE AND THE REBEL BARBARITIES.—Gov. Sprague on the 13th of May, arrived at Washington, having spent four weeks with the Federal armies at Yorktown and the Peninsula. He speaks in the highest terms of the patriotism and bravery of our soldiers. He declares in the most emphatic terms, that some of his opinions, touching the rebellion, have undergone a radical change. The barbarism, of which he had glimpses during his visit to the Bull Run battle field, he had seen in all its naked deformity on the march from Yorktown to New Kent C. H., realizing fully the atrocities of the warfare the rebels wage. He is ready now for the most rigorous and stringent measures in the treatment of these barbarians. The rosewater policy, he declares, will not answer. Here is another Democrat speaking sentiments entirely to our taste.

4TH OF JULY.—The citizens of Washington county have decided to celebrate the coming Fourth at Forest Grove, and a real old fashioned barbacue will be served for the accommodation of all who may attend and participate. Rev. T. H. Pearne is to deliver an oration—upon the occasion—and we doubt not the entertainment will be joyous, happy and highly creditable. We have an idea of going out there ourselves, so look out and save a leg of mutton.

The steamship Oregon was advertised to sail from San Francisco to Portland, via Victoria, on the 28th June. She will be here about the 4th.

By Last Night's Stage.

LATER FROM THE EAST.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Dates to June 25th.

Fight at Charleston.

Important from Corinth, Richmond and New Orleans.

PACIFIC RAILROAD BILL PASSED.

Sacramento, June 26th, via Yreka.

Dates up to the 25th have been received. The news is interesting.

The World's dispatch says: "Important rumors have been circulating to-day, to the effect that Secretary Stanton is about to relinquish the charge of the War Department. General Banks will take the place vacated."

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The tax bill passed both Houses to-day; the Senate unanimously, the House by only seven majority.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The Pacific Railroad bill passed the House to-day by 104 to 31, and now only awaits the signature of the President.

Advices are received by the War Department, dated Corinth, June 22, and from McClellan's army dated June 23. Nothing of interest has transpired in any quarter.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—A dispatch from McClellan's headquarters says, from movements of the enemy last night, and from information received from contrabands, an engagement was expected this morning. The troops were all under arms at daylight, and everything in readiness, but after a slight demonstration by the rebels, who found themselves promptly met at every point they returned to their old position.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Gen. Butler was serenaded at the St. Charles Hotel, New Orleans, on the 14th inst., and made a speech, in which he declared his feelings friendly toward the South, but at the same time he was resolved as a matter of duty, to carry out the laws of the United States under all circumstances. The speech was well received.

Rebel Gen. Lovell has gone to Vicksburg.

FORTRESS MONROE, June 23d.—The steamer City Point last night brought Richmond papers with an account of the fight at Charleston on the 16th. The account says the battle lasted all day, with heavy loss on both sides. The Charleston papers feared the battle would be renewed the next day, and expressed their fears for the safety of the city, consequent upon the Confederate loss and exhaustion of their men. From the article we judge that the rebels have been cut off from retreat from the island by the federal gunboats. If this supposition proves true the city must fall.

Dispatches to the Augusta papers from Charleston of the 16th say "a severe battle took place this morning on James' Island, a few miles from the city. Five regiments of Federals, with artillery, attacked the batteries at Secessionville. The confederates, numbering 150, repulsed the enemy three times with great slaughter. The enemy fought bravely, but were defeated. Their loss is believed to be 400, including 30 prisoners. Ours is estimated at from 50 to 100." The attack was soon to be renewed.

The Richmond Dispatch says: "It can be no longer denied that Jackson has been heavily reinforced lately. The Federal forces must either combine or fall back across the Potomac."

Yesterday the rebels opened fire upon Hooker's advance with shell, but with no serious damage. Gen. Hooker answered from one of the powerful new batteries, throwing heavy shell, which were seen to burst among the rebels.

FORTRESS MONROE, June 23.—The gunboat Jacob Bell, on Saturday, proceeded up the James river to reconnoitre, and ran aground on a sand bar. The rebels soon learned this and brought a battery of field pieces down to the bank and opened on her. She succeeded in driving them off but not until she was considerably damaged. Gen. Banks is at Winchester. Gen. Buel, with his command, left Corinth for Chatanoega. Mitchell's lines have been extended to within 25 miles of the latter place, and Gen. Buell can go that near by railroad. Gen. Morgan's army, from Cumberland gap is marching towards Knoxville.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 26.—Steamer Saint Louis arrived at 10 o'clock P. M.

Yours, etc.,

ARRIVAL OF THE "MOUNTAIN BUCK."—The ain Buck arrived last night about 11 k, with about 100 passengers and 50 of horses. The detention of this steamer was occasioned by being engaged in towing Carrie Ladd, which is in a sunken condition, rendering her very difficult to manage. three or four steamers were engaged in work, and the Julia having overtook the steamers about a mile below Vancouver also hitched on and all continued to tow Carrie until within a short distance of 's Landing, when the passengers and its were transferred from the Julia to the tain Buck, and the later steamer pro on to the city. After landing the passengers and freights, the Buck immediately ped to the assistance of the other steam and returned in company with the others lf-past 12 o'clock. The Carrie Ladd is safely moored at the ship-yard, where she undergo repairs as soon as the water sufficient to get at her.

We have dates from Elk City to June No news of great importance. The very of new diggings still continues to the public mind, and the prospects are flattering that rich developments in mineral wealth throughout that entire mining re will reward the enterprise of many ad turous gold hunters.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT FOR OREGON.—We pleased to learn that a new, or rather re tructed Military District has been set off, prising the State of Oregon and Washing Territory, and that General Benjamin ord, who was recently very justly promo from Pay Master at Post of Vancouver, been assigned to the command of this rict. This change will result very advan ous to the successful operations of the ary troops in protecting our frontier, and appointment of Gen. Alvord to the com will receive the hearty approval of our s generally, as this gentleman is known an efficient and energetic officer, very lar among his associates and beliked by ybody who has become acquainted with his ral character. The San Francisco papers unce his intended departure from that to Vancouver, the probable headquarters the District, on the steamer which left the June.

HAT HEART.—From a little poetic ex used by the editor of the Advertiser re ly, relative to a handfull of delicious wberries from one of his friends. We led to the conclusion that the editor es his heart in a differen place to what of the human species are supposed to He says:—

"But they are gone—their memories still
Are thrilling in each heart,
And not until its latest beat
Will those sweet memories depart."

ARRIVAL OF THE SAM'L MERRITT.—Bark 'l Merrill, Joseph Williams, Commander, iled from San Francisco on the 13th; expe nced strong North-west winds the entire age; crossed Columbia River Bar on the h; since then have had light winds and a mendous strong current in the river.

The Wilson G. Hunt, having been recently in running order, a rumor is afloat that has been chartered by Capt. Van Bergen, run between this city and the Cascades, ying the mail instead of the Adelaide. however, is as yet but a mere supposi n, no positive public information having obtained to that effect.

While passing through a dark tunnel near don lately, the passengers on a crowded in were startled with the report of a pistol, which they thought was the signal of a collision. On coming to daylight a middle-aged was found shot through the head. He arrived but a few hours, and was recognized a bankrupt merchant who had chosen to his life by suicide in a railroad car.

Coughs.—The sudden changes of our climate are of PULMONARY, BRONCHIAL and ASTHMATIC AFFEC- Experience having proved that simple remedies of ed speedily and certainly when taken in the early of the disease, recourse should at once be had to 's Bronchial Troches," or Lozenges, let the Cold, or Irritation of the Throat be ever so slight, as by precaution a more serious attack may be effectually off. The Naval Battle on the Mississippi—Thrilling Account

It will be remembered that in the naval engagement at Fort Pillow the Federal gunboat Cincinnati was caught in a very critical position by the rebel fleet, being two or three miles further down the stream than the consorts. She had to sustain the unexpected onset of six huge rebel gunboats but met them right gallantly, fearful as were the odds. A letter written by a person who was on board the Cincinnati during the battle is published in the Chicago Times. It [illegible] description of the fight. We quote:

One glance around showed us how critical was the state of affairs. Fully two miles and a half lay between us and the remainder of the flotilla, who, not anticipating an attack, lay with steam down tied securely to the shore, far above us. To escape up the river then were worse than useless. Our only hope was in God and our noble guns. Down stream with her, cried the captain, and obeying her rudder, the Cincinnati slowly swung round. The first rebel boat which was now but a few hundred yards from us, divining our intention, sheered out to get a chance at our stern as we came around; the next one came directly on, while the third kept in toward shore.

We were thus surrounded on all sides. Turning directly for the largest of our adversaries, we poured into her sides the whole starboard battery at a distance of not over three hundred yards. This huge craft being now above us, turned and headed directly for our starboard quarter, her immense hull looming full thirty feet above the surface of the river, not a man nor a gun, nor anything but a huge black mass to be seen. Down she came, plowing up the water with her bows. "Give it to her, boys," shouted the gunner. A bright flash, a deafening roar, and a whole broadside poured into her hull, but it did not arrest her progress, and the next instant, with a terrible crash, she came into our starboard quarter. We seemed to be lifted bodily out of the water. We surged on to our side, but soon settled back as the rebel boat drew back.

She turned again on us, when the Cincinnati, even then in a sinking condition, swung a little, and at a distance of only ten yards sent a terrible shower of solid shot crashing through the monster's rib. Smoke and steam came pouring out of her upper works. Quickly loading again, though so near that the balls were with difficulty rammed home, the starboard battery belched forth another broadside. Through and through the black hulk the balls tore their way. The monster's vitals are touched, his head swings off several points and slowly the huge mass drifts down stream. During this time another craft, painted a dry mud color, of the same build, but not quite so large as our first adversary, came steaming down on our port quarter, but on our sheering she fell astern, and crowding on all steam came fairly flying at us. Our stern battery only got two shots at her, when, about three minutes after the first shot struck, the second came into our stern with a crash that took nearly every one off their feet.

The water poured into our hull in two unbroken streams. Captain Stembel had been shot while giving orders on the spar deck, and about the same time the Fourth Master, while gallantly working his division, was shot down in his footsteps by a shot through the port hole. The boat was gradually settling, and a deep gloom overspread the crew as our appalling situation became evident. A cheer reaches our ears and joy comes to every heart as our eyes greet the Benton, Carondelet, Mound City, Pittsburg and St. Louis sweeping like an avalanche into the rebel fleet. Now came a naval engagement the like of which has been seldom seen. The rams trying to run our boats down, while we poured broadside after broadside into their huge hulls. They were not done with us yet.

Our last adversary drew back from us some hundred yards, and cracking on steam came rushing along at a fearful rate. The port stern gun was trained on her and a solid 32 pounder ball entered her bow and raked the entire length of the boat. "Haul down your flag, Yanks, and we'll save you," shouted some one. Another 32 pounder was the only response, and the next instant she struck just inside the starboard rudder. The water was now rising in the boat at a fearful rate, the engineers were up to their waists in water; a few inches more would put out the fires. Under the impression that it was useless to attempt to save her, the First Master came down the companion way and said "Boys, fight while you can, our flag will not go down until we do."

The men cheered and with renewed alacrity sprang to their guns. Those at the starboard battery had two broadsides at a rebel craft which was trying to run the Carondelet, but the Benton came between us and engaged it. She gave first her bow guns, wheeling she delivered a whole broadside, and last, her stern battery. The rebel craft having an immense hole in her bow, hauled down her flag when the Benton ceased firing and left for another, but she was no sooner away than the cowardly, dastardly rebels ran it up again.

Three of the rebel boats were now drifting helplessly down stream, one, the Mexico was laboring heavily while another was on fire. But our own condition was too critical to pay much attention to anything else. We were slowly drifting down stream, and would soon be in range of the fort. Our rudders smashed, the fires out, our case did indeed look hopeless. But the gallant old Cincinnati was not destined to be another Cumberland. Her days, glorious as they have been, were not over yet. The powerful little tugs Jessie Benton and Dauntless, made fast to her bow and succeeded in running the boat quarterwise across the river, just in time to get her on the bank when she sunk.

What is the numerical ratio of the most common names to each other and to the whole lot has never been settled in this country. English statistics, however, are more complete, and give the following facts: Of the entire population they have one Smith in 7[illegible], one Jones in 76, one Williams in 117, one Taylor in 148, one Davis in 162, one Brown in 174. If Brown don't like that, we can inform him that his initial B commences more names than any other letter in the alphabet.

Bullion.—Nine hundred pounds of bullion were shipped June 10th from Carson City over the mountains. During the week previous, there was shipped from the Territory nearly two hundred thousand dollars in bullion.

The Expected Retreat to Mexico.—The Washington correspondent of the Bulletin says:

We continue to get accessional evidences of the correctness of the opinion that Jeff Davis's original design was to retire with his army into Mexico and there conquer a new domain for slavery, [illegible] and the North united [illegible] its loyalty. Two causes have operated to interfere with the programme: first, the Virginians in his army have no idea of abandoning that State, and his troops from the Cotton States are only kept in Virginia by the argument that it is wise to defend their homes [illegible] in front of their State lines; and the Federal successes in the Southwest have cut him off his line of retreat towards the Rio Grande. He relied confidently on Forts Jackson and Philip and the other defences below New Orleans to repel us there and to keep open the route thence to Mexico. He was equally confident that his disposition for keeping the Mississippi closed above Memphis would win. But disappointed in both points, if he retires to Mexico, he must go as a simple fugitive stealing his way through [illegible] roads and [illegible] hewing the highway on which alone an armed force can move. If he could take his troops with him, he would doubtless seek to unite the army of Virginia with that under Beauregard, with the purpose of making a desperate struggle there, and in case of failure to cut his road into Mexico. That scheme, however, will hardly be tried now, for reasons already stated. In the West the stakes are set. Beauregard must fight when Halleck wants him to fight and must win; failing in that his career is ended and his army destroyed. We have heard no fear as to the result, although there is necessarily not a little anxiety in regard to movement on which so much depends.

Overland Emigration.—The St. Louis Republican of the 14th ult. says: The steamer Emilie, Captain Joseph La Barge, at three o'clock P.M. yesterday, left this port for Fort Benton and the gold regions of Washington Territory. She had on board a very large crowd of passengers, but her list will not be complete until she arrives at St. Joseph, after which we will publish a complete list of all the adventurers on board. There were several ladies in the party, who will enliven the trip. We wish the expedition great success.

The proof reader of the London Times receives an editorial salary, but has to forfeit one guinea for every typographical error, even a turned letter, in each day's impression. If he has marked an error on the proof, the compositor who neglected to correct it pays the forfeit.
